Recreation dilemma

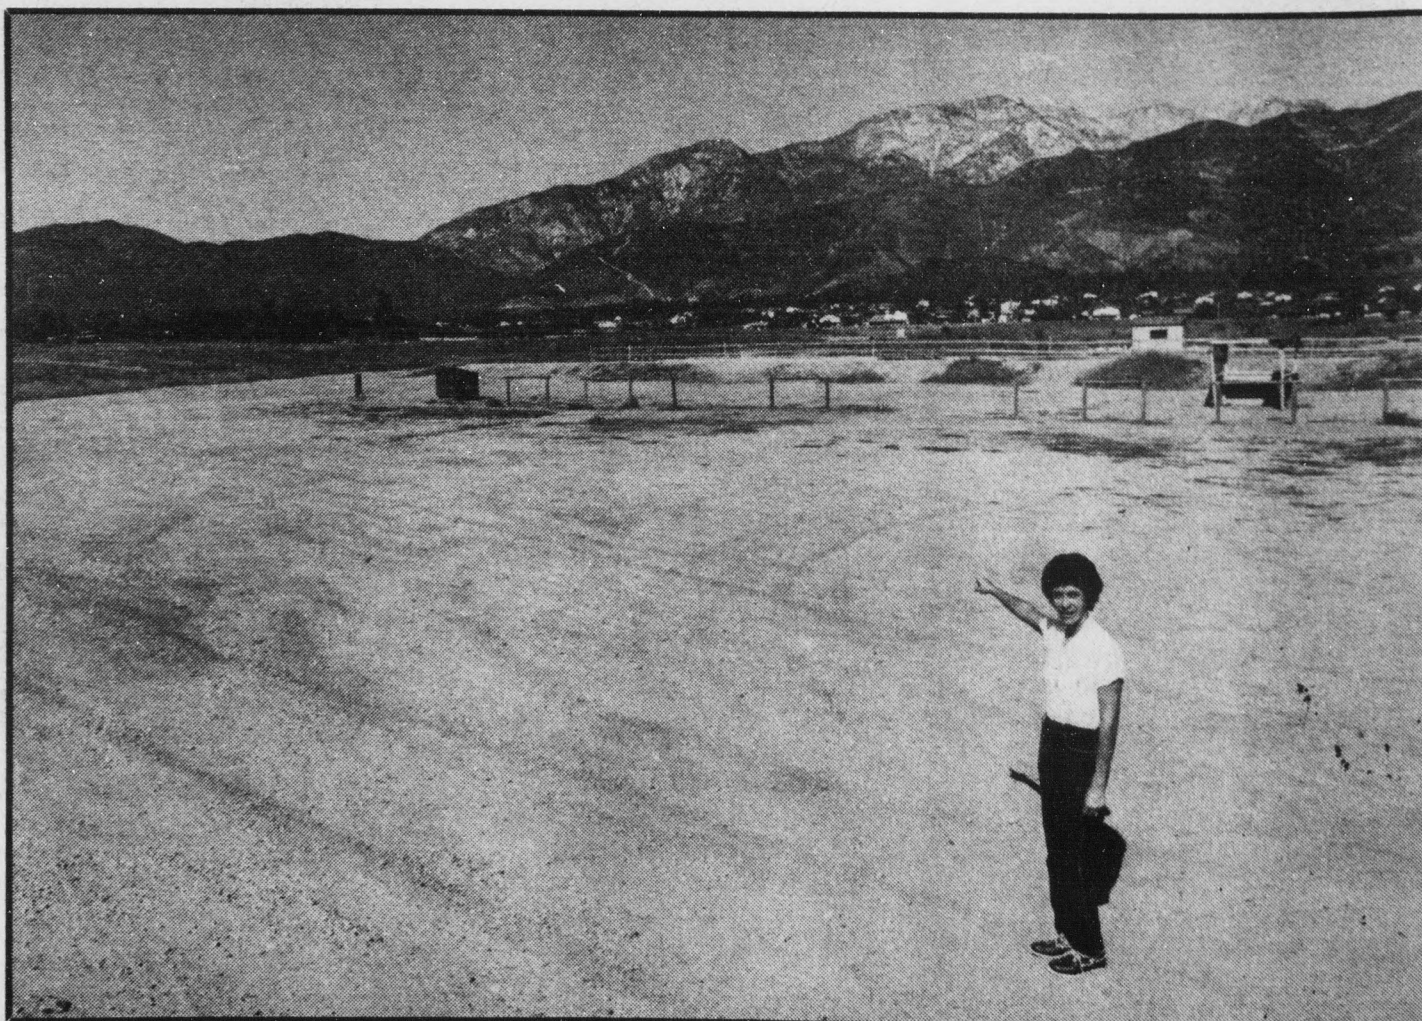

Wanted: Room to play

Looking for a way out of parks crunch

A slide gets a workout (above) from youngsters at Lions Park. Overused, the city's parks can no longer fulfill the demand of recreation groups, city officials say. Now just a barren 40 acres, Heritage Park (right) will one day ease the parks crunch in Rancho Cucamonga. Molly Mitchell is one of the citizens hoping to get the money to build the facility. On the cover: Michelle Carroll, 8 and sister Susan Carroll, 1, play on a rocking horse in Alta Loma Park.

On any Saturday the parks of Rancho Cucamonga are filled to capacity.

Youth sports teams are kicking, batting, throwing or slugging balls of various shapes and sizes wherever a big enough patch of grass has grown.

Ask anyone who frequents the city's parks and you're likely to hear that there's just not enough room.

In 1980, the city council adopted a standard that would provide five acres of park for every 1,000 residents.

At the time, the city owned three parks amounting to about 20 acres. Rancho Cucamonga had a population of 56,000.

Today's population tops 60,000 and there are still only 20 acres of developed park in Rancho Cucamonga.

Even with park sites acquired since 1980, the city would fall 156 acres short of the five-acre goal.

But there is hope, according to those within the city's park department.

The biggest hope is Heritage Park.

A 40-acre square of land in Alta Loma, the park is expected to provide recreation for several groups within the city.

A year's worth of planning has resulted in what amounts to a general plan of how the park will be laid out.

Much of that work was done by a citizens committee.

Molly Mitchell was one of those who decided someone had to get the ball rolling.

"One thing we're lacking is parks," she said. "I used to play and coach soccer and we always were trying to find a field or school to play at."

With 11 others, Mitchell provided the ideas that were eventually put on paper by the city's park consultant.

She said she feels every committee member added to the group's recommendation.

"Everybody interjected their thoughts," she said. "Basically we all wanted the same thing ... we wanted a park that can be used by everyone."

The citizen-group approach is expected to be repeated elsewhere. A similar project is being called Red Hill Basin Park.

Actually an extension of the current Vineyard Park, Red Hill would encompass 42 acres now owned by the county flood control district.

The area is no longer subject to flooding and can be used as sports fields, said city park director William Holley.

A citizens committee will be formed shortly to begin design of the park, he added.

But the futures of Red Hill and Heritage park are clouded.

Like plans for many public facilities, their construction is on hold until a source of money can be found.

"The citizens have got to understand that there is no money coming into the city, in terms of revenue from Sacramento, that is earmarked for parks," said Councilman Richard Dahl, a member of the council's park committee.

One funding source that is being seriously looked at is a "community facilities district."

Residents within the district would pay an assessment for construction of parks, allowing the city to sell bonds to get the projects going. (Construction of the two parks is expected to cost around $4 million, Dahl said.)

A district can only be formed, however, with two-thirds voter approval.

Mitchell senses public enthusiasm for the idea.

"That's the only way we're going to get that park," she said. "I'm not alone in my thoughts ... we're a pretty determined group."

Dahl feels the matter should be initiated by the public with no prompting from the city council.

"They have to run it," he said.

Should the measure pass (its backers hope to place it on the ballot next year), it would mark the first park sites built by the city since incorporation.

Holley sees it as a "corporate" decision.

"Sometimes we are viewed as the city but the city is really all of us. We're all shareholders. Voters will have to analyze the facts and ask themselves, 'Do we want parks?'"

"The answer we hear now is yes."

Big parks aren't the only things on the planning table.

The city has acquired property near Arrow Route and Vineyard Avenue that will eventually link with the proposed Bear Gulch School.

Another park near Archibald Avenue and Foothill Boulevard is expected to be completed soon.

The 6.6-acre park was donated by the Marlborough company as a requirement for building a nearby condominium complex.

Also under city ownership is a park site along Hermosa Avenue near another proposed school.

Two small parks along the Cucamonga Creek trail system are expected to become part of the city's park system next year.

In addition, a 99-acre park is proposed for property along Deer Creek and Base Line Road.

Linking many of the parks will be a trail system. Portions of the system are already completed.

The eastern portion of the city is taken care of, Holley said, by park requirements placed on the two large planned communities there.

Park funds will have to be developed to build sites in west Rancho Cucamonga, he added.

"The public's perception that the city has a lot of money is not exactly the case," Holley said. "The money that comes in from park fees is either being spent or encumbered in acquisition."

Councilman Jim Frost, another member of the council's park committee, agreed that filling the need for sports fields is of primary importance.

He says the city must also look to the day when that need is fulfilled.

"There are also needs for various types of nature parks," he said. "I'm pushing for a strip park underneath the power lines in the northwest portion of the city."

"I'd also like to see some of the canyons (become parks)."

"There hasn't been a great deal of discussion on that because now the needs of the city are for sports fields ... but we'd be remiss if we didn't dream."

Doug Hutchings puts the finishing touches on his Scout project.

The nature of "good deeds" are often anonymous

No signatures or plaques adorn the rock landscapes, painted bleachers or refurbished picnic benches at Upland's public parks.

There is nothing giving credit to the volunteer workers who spend their free time beautifying the city's recreational facilities.

That's the nature of "good deeds," they are often anonymous.

However, Upland recreation director Larry Thornburg decided last week to give credit where credit is due, identifying the mystery volunteers as members of local Boy Scout troops.

The workers are manning their paint brushes and hammers in efforts to become Eagle Scouts, the highest ranking in the Boy Scout organization.

Between the ages of 16 and 18, the workers spend more than 100 manhours to coordinate and complete their individual projects, says Thornburg.

The latest endeavor was a 150-foot rock landscape project on an embankment at Greenbelt Park.

Doug Hutchings of Alta Loma coordinated the project to imbed the dirt embankment with large rocks.

Thornburg says the structure is a lot easier than foliage to maintain because it never needs weeding or irrigation.

More scouts are planning on constructing another rock design at the entrance to the park.

Picnickers at Olivedale Park can eat in comfort thanks to scout David Frandsen, who re-roofed and painted one of the park's picnic shelters.

More scouts are planning to renovate directional signs throughout the park.

At Sierra Vista park, playground equipment and one restroom received a new coat of paint from scout John Trent.

And local Little League Baseball players can tip their hats to some scouts who are planning to build dugout benches and a scoreboard at Memorial Park.

While most of the paints, brushes, stains and other materials are supplied by the city, Thornburg says the scouts are making an invaluable contribution.

"There's a lot of projects that would never get done, unless these guys did them for us."

Dr. Hugh Kohler has recently written a book simplifying the explanation of the functions of the human body.

Book aims to clarify medicine for layman

By Terri Tirella

Rancho Cucamonga can add another name to its list of local authors: Hugh Francis Kohler, M.D.

Kohler's book is "Man the Machine." Published in August, it compares man's body to that of a car with similar systems -- and similar problems.

While not striving to be an Ernest Hemingway or a Scott Fitzgerald, Kohler has attempted to bring two worlds together -- that of a medical doctor and that of the layman.

"People tend to be confused by what we, as physicians, tell them," Kohler said. "How can we explain what certain words mean, or where (body) organs are and what they do? There isn't time." However, he noted, "Everyone rides in a car, so I compared the body to it. The heart is the engine, the nervous system is the electrical system and the bone structure is the body."

Kohler said he got the idea for his book while recovering from coronary bypass surgery.

"People (who were recovering) were reading books of some type; the majority were mysteries and love stories. Once in awhile, you'd see someone with a medical interest reading that kind of book."

His book is for lay individuals, and is not a medical text. "An inflammation is an -itis. But if you tell a patient he has cystitis, an inflammation of the bladder, he usually thinks he has a cyst," the physician said.

Because the medical vocabulary is confusing and most physicians are too busy to sit down and explain terms to their patients, Kohler decided to write his book.

"I started working on it in 1979 and then left it alone until I had a subsequent illness," he continued.

"I wanted to complete it. I didn't want to abandon it because it had a usefulness," he said.

Completing the book turned into a real family affair, according to Kohler. "My sister did the final typing, my son did the graphics, my other son, clinical director at Lanterman State Hospital, helped with modifications and structure."

After four rewrites, "Man the Machine" was ready. "Then the publisher gave me galley prints to go over," the doctor said.

Kohler, who is a family practitioner in Alta Loma, said he included a lot of timely statistics, such as figures from the American Cancer Society relating to smoking and cancer.

"A lot of times a patient won't believe what their doctor tells them. They don't believe what they don't want to hear. They want to avoid it, even if we try to convince them it may be a life-saving procedure," he said.

His book also contains advice on nutrition and dieting, foods that are beneficial for certain medical conditions and foods that should be avoided by people with certain diseases.

"I included the warning symptoms of malignant diseases and have the symptoms of hypertension," he said.

Hypertension is another disease lay people seem to get confused about, according to Kohler. When people learn they have hypertension, "they will say they feel they are a tense individual. Being under tension may have something to do with hypertension, but it is not a straight-out cause. There are numerous causes of hypertension."

Kohler and his wife, Jo, have been married for 36 years. They have four children and three grandchildren.

"My wife let me do my own thing (when writing the book). She had to do a book when she did her thesis for her masters degree. I let her do her thing and she let me do mine. She was supportive though, I'll say that." □

Confessions of a private eye

By Terri Tirella

Television detectives of "Rockford Files," "Magnum, P.I.," and "Matt Houston" lead the public to believe private investigators can solve any crime, win the beautiful girl over to their side and have a few dangerous run-ins with the bad guys, but come out without a scratch. It just isn't so in the real world.

"Each private investigator is a little bit different. Like doctors, we specialize in certain areas," said Ken Greenlee, owner of Dial One Security, Upland.

He specializes in retail and interstate theft, and is usually involved in employee investigations. Other investigators handle cases ranging from marital investigations and traffic accidents to robberies.

Investigators will work on just about anything that someone would pay money to find out about, Greenlee said.

"All investigators have to be licensed by the state of California and there are strict guidelines of what we can do and can't do. We have to abide by all laws and cannot divulge information to any member of the public, or use it against someone, like blackmail. We report to an individual, just like in an attorney-client relationship," he said.

Greenlee has an extensive background in security, beginning with experience as a law enforcement officer. He has served as a director of security for several retail stores. He also uses a voice analyzer, which works like a polygraph.

Greenlee is also an expert investigator for San Bernardino Superior Court. "When a person cannot afford an attorney, they get a district attorney (public defender). The state also authorizes to have an investigator do investigations for them," he explained.

According to Greenlee, private investigators maintain a close relationship with local police departments in Southern California areas.

"Most of the time, police do not get themselves involved in what are called civil cases or employee investigations, finding out where missing merchandise is going. They don't have time, so they welcome help from a private investigator hired by the company."

According to Greenlee, being a private investigator can sometimes be a dangerous profession. "When you're dealing with airlines, truck freighting, major accounts that may have a large hijacking or large theft, the situation gets dangerous because those boys can get rough."

American youth: Have they outgrown the junior high?

American children are getting older at a younger age. Compared with kids of previous generations, they mature earlier, are taller, heavier, more worldly.

Some educators believe these children have outgrown an American institution: junior high school.

Nowadays, with enormous physical and emotional gaps between 12 and 15, they say, putting seventh graders and ninth graders together in the same school is like throwing innocent farm kids in with a bunch of big-city hustlers.

One solution, being used across the nation, is the so-called "middle school."

In a full-blown middle school, post-pubescent ninth graders are moved out to high schools and sixth graders are moved up from elementary schools. The result is a grade 6-7-8 school geared to the problems and capabilities of modern adolescents.

"A ninth grader is really more like a high school student," says one educator. "They are bigger, older, more mature. ... And sixth graders are more sophisticated now because of TV and other things. They may not be smarter, but they've been exposed to more

Church uses innovation to grow

By Terri Tirella

The associate pastor at an Alta Loma church sees an unusual problem in a world many religious leaders are decrying as increasingly ungodly. The Rev. Robert Acker says there are not enough churches.

"Southern California needs more churches, American needs more churches," Acker of the Community Baptist Church, said.

"There are not enough churches to the 80 percent of the population that is unchurched. Even if you filled all the churches five times (with people attending services) there would not be enough churches for everybody," he said. CBC is currently planting a church in the Claremont area.

Acker attributes his church's growth and vitality to unconventional methods and zealous parishioners.

"Three out of five people (in the congregation) are not from a Baptist background. We're trying to reach unchurched people," said Acker.

The congregation has grown from a handful in 1977 to about 500 adults. Robert Logan was the founding pastor.

The pastoral staff has grown along with the congregation, Acker said. "We have about a one (pastor) to 120 (members) ratio."

The church is launching a Friday night service to accompany its three Sunday services at 8:15 a.m., 9:35 a.m. and 11 a.m.

"The whole need for innovation is to make things happen. It has helped us reach people and meet their needs," Acker said.

Not passing an offering plate during services is one change CBC has made because, according to Acker, people coming to services say they feel like the church continually asks for money.

"On principle, people need to give. We have an offering box on the back wall so people can give without feeling the pressure of seeing a plate go by," he said.

Another reason the congregation has grown, Acker says, is membership involvement. "We try to involve people in ministry. Each person has special gifts, God gives each Christian a set of talents designed for that person to use, whether it is mercy, care for the ill, or leadership."

The pastoral staff does not include the only ministers at CBC, according to Acker. Each member of the congregation ministers with his or her special talent, whether it's hosting activities, mowing lawns, or teaching Sunday school.

CBC also offers small-group study for adults in members' homes. "The groups are limited in size and it is a time for sharing and growth. At our worship service it is a celebrative thing and it's more exciting to have a lot of people. But for interaction and growth, you need a cell group," he said.

The five acres the church is located on will provide room for building to meet the needs of the congregation and the community, Acker said.

"In some ways the church in the '80's has to use creativity when thinking of facilities. The early church grew to 5,000 in number and they had no buildings. Buildings are a necessary evil but should be second to meeting people's needs," Acker said.

"We're not as interested in a building. We would rather see the ministry grow and touch lives," he said. A family center, gymnasium, education multi-purpose facility may show up in CBC's master building plan.

CBC offers sports ministry, XYZ, Years of Extra Zest for senior citizens; singles activities for working people and students; women's activities, children's Sunday School and youth development.

"We want to provide an alternative for youth to pressures of today," he said.

Professional counseling services are also available. The church is at 9090 19th St., Alta Loma. For information call 987-8594. □

'Library' lends pieces of science, history

Tucked away in the basement of the Natural History Museum is an unusual "lending library" offering thousands of scientific and historical specimens and artifacts related to the museum's collections.

Any adult, upon payment of a $5 annual membership fee, may borrow a bit of science or history.

Scientific exhibits available to library cardholders include such exotic specimens as a wombat, an armadillo, and the scapula of an extinct saber-tooth cat.

Displays which may be borrowed range from intricately woven Chumash baskets and other Indian artifacts to detailed models from U.S. history, such as Jefferson's architectural masterpiece, Monticello.

A variety of illustrative materials are also available including slides, pictures, stereographs, maps, charts, and posters.

The Natural History Museum is located south of the Santa Monica Freeway and west of the Harbor Freeway at 900 Exposition Boulevard. The Lending Service, located off the Museum Staff Parking Lot on Exposition Boulevard, is open Tuesday through Friday from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.

GOING FOR MARITAL COUNSELING

Q. If one spouse refuses to go for marriage counseling, how can the other convince him or her to get involved?

A. Marriage is not easy—even for the most compatible couples. All relationships go through up and down periods, and sometimes a couple finds themselves really stuck in an unsatisfying way of relating to each other that causes both partners undesirable pain and frustration.

While marital counseling can often be a helpful boost, not all partners are ready for this at the same time. Very often, if a reluctant partner talks to someone, a friend whom he respects, who has had direct experience with the counseling process, it will help to de-mystify it. Some partners will agree to go for just one visit to see how it feels. Also, if one partner starts by him- or herself, the other may join in at a later date as he/she sees how the partner is changing. It is most important to let a reluctant spouse know that your motives are well-intentioned—that you are seeking help because you care about the marriage and want to improve matters. If someone feels that the primary purpose is merely to cast blame, that makes it more difficult to join in the venture.

Study says decline in housing production has left deep scars on California's economic health

Although housing production trends are on the upturn within the state, the turnaround follows a five-year decline in residential construction volume that has left deep scars on California's economic well-being.

And while the future holds promise of continued rising housing starts, the outlook is clouded by indications that there will still be a wide gap between the pace of home building and actual housing needs.

These conclusions were drawn in a recent study of the impact of the housing construction decline on the California economy and state and local government revenues. The report, just released, was prepared by the state Construction Industry Research Board (Ben Bartolotto, director) for the California Legislature's Joint Committee on the State's Economy.

In a summary of major findings, the report said California housing production fell in 1982 to its lowest level since World War II, and that the decline started after 1977, with the steepest part occurring between 1979 and 1982, when production fell 60 percent, from 210,000 units in 1979 to 84,000 in 1982.

The decline in these three years alone cost the state a $23.5 billion loss in business revenues, a $5.7 billion loss in income and a loss of 390,000 jobs for workers. The employment loss represents 30 percent of the number of unemployed workers in the state, according to the report.

These findings demonstrate how important new housing is to California's economic health, and also to the needs of literally thousands and thousands of families who are or will be looking for a place to live. The latter is the most emotional, frustrating impact of all.

State and local governments also suffered financially due to this plunge in the housing industry. The report says the three-year decline resulted in the following tax revenue losses:

State revenues from sales and income taxes fell $412.6 million, which equates to 27.5 percent of the $1.5 billion budget deficit that faced the state earlier this year.

Local governments lost $115.4 million in local property and sales tax revenues.

The study found that the future outlook is better, but still far from rosy. Bartolotto said housing needs in this decade are "conservatively" estimated at 2.7 million units, or an average of 270,000 units a year. More realistically, the projections are for between 1.5 million and 1.7 million units to be built in the 10 years, or averaging between 150,000 and 170,000 units annually. This lower level of housing production will mean $27.8 billion a year less in business revenues, $6.6 billion less in income, and 262,000 fewer jobs. State and local tax revenues will be curbed proportionately.

Worse yet, the families needing housing will find it even more difficult to find shelter. The study came up with the bleak conclusion that the present shortfall can only grow and the gap between housing supply and need can only widen. Already the shortfall is calculated at 224,602 units. Bartolotto said these findings resulted from intensive research, using a highly technical new system of computer analysis.

What can be done about a deplorable housing situation?

"The level of housing production in the 1980s is largely dependent on the state of the economy," the report concluded. "However, state and local policies and attitudes (including environmental restraints) will also play a significant role in determining the level of housing production." Impacts are felt not only in construction but in related industries and the general economy as well.

knowledge."

Middle schools have grown in popularity since their inception in the late 1950s and early 1960s. Nationwide, the number of middle schools grew from near zero at the beginning of the 1960s to 1,101 in 1968 and 4,060 in 1978.

There are an estimated 5,000 middle schools now in the nation, constituting almost half of the 12,000 schools operating for children 12 to 15, said Dr. William Alexander, professor emeritus at the University of Florida and one of the founding fathers of the middle school movement.

Alexander said the middle school grew from dissatisfaction among educators in the 1950s with the 7-8-9-grade junior high, which had become the nationwide standard for intermediate schools during the 1940s after one-room schoolhouses became a rarity.

"There was a feeling that junior high schools emphasized the ninth graders too much," Alexander said. "You were throwing prepubescent, preadolescent kids in with children much more mature. ... The seventh graders were being forced into an adolescent-type situation too early."

Alexander presented his ideas on middle schools in 1963 at a conference at Cornell University in New York state — the "Cornell Conference" that spread the word on the merits of middle schools.

But he was not alone. "I thought I was coming up with something real new, and a couple of people came up to me and said they were

School's new way to communicate

By Terri Tirella

Animation, an underappreciated art form more often considered the folly of children than a significant entertainment medium, has found its way to Cucamonga

Junior High.

The school's animation class is the final project financed with state School Improvement Funds given to Cucamonga Junior High School five years ago.

"The first year, we upgraded basic subjects — English, reading, math and then made (an improvement) schedule for each year," Sheri Nagel, school principal, said.

Other improvements with SIF monies included adding physical education, home economics and vocational training classes. The other program that can be initiated with SIF monies is fine arts.

According to Nagel, SIF monies could not be used to enhance an existing program, and since Cucamonga Junior High already offered basic and advanced art, ceramics and photography, art teacher Linda Weber developed another program revolving around fine arts.

The school received $3,000 to purchase equipment, including cameras, light sets, a light table and other materials necessary for its animation class.

"I think the animation class is terrific, but my philosophy on electives (at the junior high level) is different," Nagel said.

"Of course we need strong basics, but there are many times students are limited (in electives) at the high school level, that this (junior high) is the time they have to get exposed to areas, be it a future hobby or optional career choice.

"We want to give students a broad scope to choose from, to really enrich their lives," Nagel said.

Weber said she searched for a long time to find a different kind of art program to qualify for SIF, and she's excited about the class.

"We're doing our first day of filming our flip books," she said.

Students in the animation classes will make 124 drawings for their first project, 12 drawings for one second of film.

"I told them to draw something they enjoyed drawing, something that was easy for them. I didn't want them to get frustrated. They've already turned in 96 drawings," she said.

Weber said the school was hoping to be adopted by an animation studio, something that generally occurs when animation programs get underway.

The films may be submitted to the Los Angeles Student Film Animation Festival for students. "Each film is previewed and judged in front of an audience," Weber said.

Planning a story board helps students with their special effects, according to Weber. "It lets me know if the plan to start a fire on the set or blow it up. With a story board, they can find mistakes before they start filming because once they start they can't stop."

The students' first films is two-dimensional. Their next project will be three-dimensional, using clay figures and elaborate sets.

"We like to think it's four-dimensional, because we're taking it a step farther," she said.

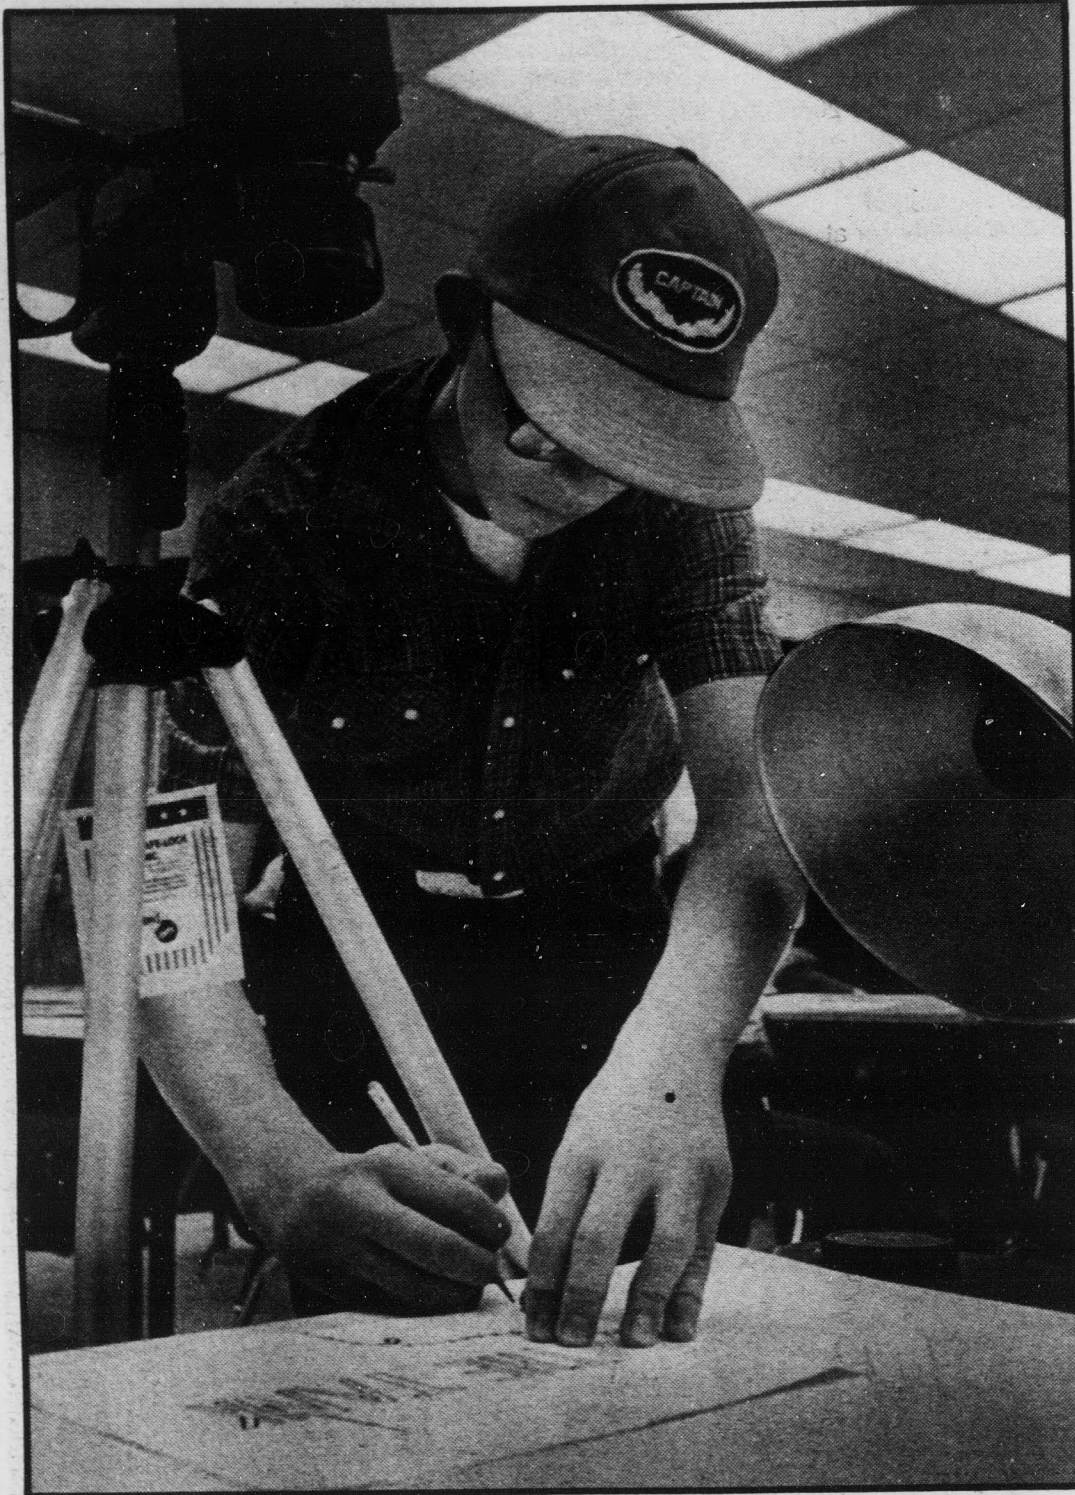

For the first film, students will photograph their flip books, pages of drawings with each page, or film frame just a little different to show progression, or a subject moving across the screen.

Initially, the children write their film stories. "We have a lot of races, with cars and motorcycles; space and war seem to be general themes from kids," Weber said.

"They think this is a lot (124 drawings) but it makes them realize what is really involved in cartoons."

"We have more respect for just short cartoons, especially the good ones, because we know how much work it takes," Don Worley, a student in Weber's animation

Dad told tall tales when on the water

By John H. Nicholson

When my Dad was a youngster, he lived in Long Beach for a few years. Among his friends were several who had boats of one kind or another. He joined them and developed a real love of the water and fishing.

When I was about 10 years old, Pop announced that he wanted his kids to have some of that same experience and fun. He rented a small plot of waterfront ground in Bay Shore Camp, where the Coast Highway crosses Newport Bay.

He built a comfortable 14-by-20-foot tenthouse for a retreat and my mother, sister Mildred and I began spending most of our summers there. Pop came down on weekends. I wormed my way into a variety of boating and became rather adept at it. This "messing about in boats" helped shape parts of my career in later years.

Back here, in Upland, I became a Boy Scout, eventually working up from "Tenderfoot" to Eagle Scout. Six of us received our Eagle badges from California's Gov. Rolph, in a ceremony in front of the grandstand, at the "Pomona Fair" one year.

In those days, Upland had a Scout House at what is now the southeast corner of D Street and Third Avenue. D Street ended at Third then. That building served us well, but was later turned over to the Girl Scouts. A new Boy Scout House was built just to the east. Both buildings have long since vanished. We learned a lot there under Scoutmaster Harold J. Stickney and, later, Earl Hawthorne, my uncle.

Several of us older Scouts became interested in the Sea Scout program. Pop agreed to "skipper" Upland's first Sea Scout ship. "Ship," as used here, means group, similar to "troop" in regular scouting. We learned many useful things and enjoyed doing it.

I recall a Scouting skills program one evening on the stage of Merton E. Hill auditorium. Making fire by friction was on event. Don Schowalter and I decided to enter as Sea Scouts, competing against regular scouts.

In general, "fire by friction" amounts to the rapid spinning of a round, wooden spindle, in a specially shaped hole in a piece of soft wood. The friction, where the two meet, causes heat. Soon, wearing particles begin to smoke. The hot spot is caught in a bit of very fine tinder, and blown upon until it bursts into flame. It can take several minutes. (Can demonstrate if you insist.)

Don and I decided on a gag, to "show up those ordinary scouts." We imbedded several match heads in the business end of our spindles, and put a few drops of gasoline on our tinder. At the word "go," the others went feverishly to work.

We goofed around a bit, Laurel and Hardy style. As one contestant began to get some smoke, we went into action. With one twirl of our spindles, we had fire. It made a good show, but we disqualified ourselves, of course.

In later years, I think I held about every kind of a volunteer adult job in scouting. It ranged from skipper of the Newport Beach Sea Scout Ship, to scoutmaster of Upland Troop 1, and aide to Joe Seitz, skipper of Upland's Sea Scout Ship "Tigershark." My own son, Dan, was a member of the latter two groups.

About the time I entered Chaffey High School (our only local high school, then), Mom and Pop sold the grove and home on East 14th Street. They bought a smaller grove and a nicer home at 2049 N. Euclid Ave., and we moved.

By that time, Pop, who had carpentered for years, for the Modern Construction Co., of Cucamonga, had become school carpenter at Chaffey. The job later worked into superintendent of buildings and grounds. So, I rode to school and back with him.

Pop was quite a character, and had a great

Long search for family bears fruit

Family has always been important to Betty Tolleson of Pomona. The events of three days in September made it even more precious.

Tolleson, with the loving assistance of her husband Charles and their four children, was reunited with her natural mother in late September after 52 years of separation.

And this week, she caught up on childhood memories with her brother, William Hines Jr., in Pomona. They last saw one another in the Colorado state orphanage in 1931.

Since the tearful reunion with her mother, Opal McGuire, in a Del Norte, Col. rest home, Tolleson's family has grown considerably. Besides her immediate family — daughters Kay Dotts and Susan Bell, both of Rancho Cucamonga, and Cheryl Phillips of Pomona, son Terry Tolleson of San Jose and 12 grandchildren — it now includes her natural brother Bill Hines Jr., adopted brother Bob Buesching and his biological mother and two half-sisters, three half-sisters, seven aunts and a host of nieces, nephews and countless cousins.

In 1931, Tolleson was 7, the oldest of four children born to William and Opal Hines.

"Our father took off and left our mother with us. It was in the middle of the Depression and there wasn't any welfare to help people. My mother was one of 12 children herself. Her family was struggling to make ends meet, too, and couldn't help her. So, she had to place us in the state orphanage in Denver," Tolleson recalled.

Tolleson — whose name was originally Viola — was adopted less Betty Tolleson of Pomona and William Hines Jr. of Denver, Colo., pieced together fragments of their childhood memories in a loving and tearful reunion this week in Pomona. The brother and sister last saw each other in the Colorado state orphanage in 1931. They're still searching for another brother and sister.

Tapeworm invades San Diego man's brain

The seizure blasted Thor Kauffman's brain about 5 a.m. one morning last month. His body vibrated out of bed, his head smashing into the nightstand as he thrashed to the floor.

Several minutes elapsed before the seizure stopped, leaving the 23-year-old feeling like "someone had hit me in the head with a baseball bat."

Angela Kauffman, 22, called paramedics for her husband, who was rushed from their North Park home to Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Diego.

Doctors there soon made the diagnosis: Kauffman had in his brain a golf ball-size cyst caused by the larva of a giant pork tapeworm.

Kauffman had fallen victim to a disease that is rare in the United States, but occasionally found in Mexico, where Kauffman was born and continues to visit.

Two days after it was discovered on Oct. 19, neurosurgeons removed the cyst from Kauffman's brain. Each day he is regaining more strength. The paralysis on his left side is almost gone. He is expected to make a full recovery and return soon to work as a furniture mover.

It isn't known when or where Kauffman picked up the tapeworm larva.

Doctors speculate he may have ingested infected pork or contaminated vegetables years ago when he lived in southern Mexico. Or he could have gotten the larva in Tijuana, where he had been buying his groceries for several months, and where he loved to eat pork at roadside stands.

However the infection occurred, it has frightened the Kauffmans, causing them to alter their eating habits.

Kauffman's plight is an indication of the insidious bugs one can get in other countries.

Many people are familiar with trichinosis, a disease contracted when people eat pork infected with tiny parasites and insufficiently cooked, causing muscle pains and fevers.

People can avoid problems with the tapeworm larva that struck Kauffman by cooking pork extensively before eating it, doctors say.

But there are additional sources for pork tapeworm infections, particularly vegetables (lettuce, cabbage and strawberries are cited) that can be infected with the tapeworm larvae.

Thoroughly washing vegetables helps limit the possibility of becoming infected with the tapeworm parasite.

The pork tapeworm larva that disrupted Kauffman's life is called taenia solium. The larva of taenia solium is what develops inside a host's intestine into a tapeworm. Usually these tapeworms are from two to four meters long, but they have been reported as long as eight meters.

During a stage of larva growth, they burrow through the intestinal wall and get into the host's bloodstream. The larvae have an affinity for brain tissue. Once a larva gets into the brain, a cyst then develops as the brain tissue becomes inflamed by the larva's presence.

That is what happened to Kauffman. He was sleeping, then he was jolted by the seizure caused by the cysticercosis, as the cyst disease is known.

Emblem Club lends sheriffs a hand

By Terri Tirella

Members of the Rancho Cucamonga Emblem Club are helping the San Bernardino County sheriff's department put numbers on Rancho Cucamonga roofs.

"We bought lumber for the sheriffs to cut big number stencils to loan to members of the community. Residents can spray paint the number on the roof so when the sheriff's helicopter flies overhead, the pilot can quickly locate the hundred block when there is a problem," said lone Hoxsey, No. 520 chapter president.

"From the air the helicopter can find the street, but finding the hundred block can be a problem. With the number on the roof it will make it easier to respond," said Sam Merenda, crime prevention officer at the Rancho Cucamonga Sheriff's Substation.

"Fontana Police Department started it about two years ago. We liked the idea so we took it from them," he said.

The painting will begin sometime in late January or February, according to Merenda. "We don't want numbers on too many buildings: We just want to distinguish the hundred block. We don't want the community to look like a concentration camp (from the air)."

"We want to be a part of things ... if a family needs help, we want to help them," Hoxsey said. "Charity begins at home, so let's start with Rancho Cucamonga."

The local Emblem Club is a service organization made up of wives, sisters and daughters of Elks in Lodge No. 2570. Emblem clubs have been around since 1926: The Rancho Cucamonga branch formed in October of 1979, installing its first officers February 3, 1980.

"We do all sorts of service projects, from either donating food, money or clothing to a needy family to having our Americanism chairman call to remind us to fly our flag on Fourth of July," Hoxsey said.

The club's fund-raisers include rummage sales and bazaars. "We support the American Cancer Society, City of Hope, Special Olympics and contribute a large sum to a hearing dog program that's in Riverside," she said.

She said the Riverside program trains dogs for the hearing impaired, teaching the animals to react to the telephone ringing or to someone at the front door. "Or say there is a deaf mother and the baby is crying, the dog alerts her."

Hoxsey said it costs $2,500 to train a dog. "A lot of people pay for the dog after it has been trained. A lot can't afford to. That's where we come in."

Working on projects for people suffering a hearing loss is close to local Emblem Club members' hearts because they have two members who wear hearing aids.

The organization also donates money to the Supreme Emblem Club, which funnels funds throughout the nation. "We donate to the Supreme disaster fund, which (three days) after Coalinga suffered the earthquake ... sent $5,000 to the Coalinga Emblem Club, which quickly aided their sisters and members. It didn't cover everything, but it helped," Hoxsey said.

The local Emblem Club also donates to the national scholarship fund, which awards scholarships to children and grandchildren of Elks and Emblem Club members. "We contribute heavily

Library sponsors contest for kids

Library news

By Diane Williams
President,
Friends of RC
Branch Library

This is the first of a series of weekly articles about the Rancho Cucamonga Branch Library. We want to use this space to acquaint you with your library. We will tell you about upcoming events and programs at the library as well as announce new book arrivals as they received. Occasionally, these announcements of new books will be accompanied by reviews. You will learn more about the different special collections such as the large print editions. There is a wide variety of materials other than books available for your use and enjoyment and you will learn more about them in future articles.

The new computer system that went into use Nov. 1 is operating smoothly. The patrons have been very cooperative about the few delays caused by the changeover and their understanding is appreciated. Remember, you can get your new computer coded library card at any time and immediately check out books or materials. There is no charge for the new card.

The Friends of the Rancho Cucamonga Library were pleased with the response from the community at the reception and book signing featuring Sam Maloof. The slide presentation was very popular. We want to thank Mr. Maloof for his donation of a copy of his book, "Sam Maloof ... Woodworker," to the library collection. It is available for use in the reference department.

Watch this space for news of future activities of the "Friends" group. We will soon announce the date of the next used book sale, one of the most popular events.

The children's librarian, Joyce McMaster, reminds us that the week of Nov. 14-20 is Children's Book Week. This year's theme is "Get Into Books." All local children are invited to enter a book design contest being conducted by the San Bernardino County Library. Entry blanks may be picked up now at the Rancho Cucamonga Branch Library and must be returned by noon Monday, Nov. 21. Winners will be selected according to age categories and will have their award winning bookmarks printed and distributed for everyone to see. All children who enter the contest will receive a "Get Into Books" badge. Holiday books for children are being gathered together for easy access. Now is the time to come in and select your favorite holiday story.

And, speaking of holidays, if you need help in preparing your holiday meals, come in and look over the cookbook section. There is an excellent selection available at this time. It's not too late to start that needlework project for Christmas giving. Check our needlework and crafts section for some creative ideas.

business meeting to be followed by entertainment provided by JoAnn Warner Dance Studio.

R.C. VIP Club

The Rancho Cucamonga VIP Club will hold a business meeting at 10 a.m. Thursday at the Rancho Cucamonga Neighborhood Center, 9791 Arrow Highway, Rancho Cucamonga.

A special "Friendship Dance" is planned Nov. 20 from 2 to 5 p.m. for people 50 and older. Music will be provided by Mel Meares.

Free maintenance

A free maintenance program for homeowners and mobile home owners is available to residents of Rancho Cucamonga, Upland and Ontario.

Labor and parts up to $25 are free. Workers repair roofs, swamp coolers, broken windows, screens and does simple plumbing and electrical work as well as installing dead bolt locks and smoke alarms.

Call the Steelworkers Oldtimers Foundation in Fontana at 822-4493 for more information.

Boutique

A bazaar hosted by the Retired Senior Volunteer Program of the Upland Nutrition Center, 352 E. C St., Upland, starts Monday and will run for four weeks daily from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

All of the items being offered were knitted, crocheted or sewed by the seniors.

The public is invited to attend.

More entrants being sought

Entrants are still being sought for all divisions of the Miss Southern California Belle Beauty Pageant, to be held in December.

Pageant director Mary DeWald said there are several openings in the La Petite (2 to 4) and Little Miss (5 to 9) divisions and a few in the Pee Wee (one month to one year), Junior (9 to 12), Teen (13 to 17) and Senior (18-23) divisions.

Each division will have a queen, nine princesses, Miss Photogenic and Miss Congeniality.

Participants must file an application along with an application fee or sponsorship.

The four lower divisions, Pee Wee through Junior, will be held Saturday, Dec. 3 at the Uplander Hotel, beginning at 10 a.m.

The Teen and Senior divisions will be held at the Chaffey College Theater on Saturday, Dec. 17.

Queens are required to reign one year and will make various public appearances.

Judging is on a point basis for beauty, poise and personality. There is no talent or microphone judging.

For information on the pageant, fees, requirements or for an application, call 985-8802, 989-1138 or 986-4896.

sense of humor. At one point, thinking of home security, he proposed putting up a bold sign at our driveway entrance, reading, "Beware of vicious dogs." He went on to explain, "it's not that I have any vicious dogs, but it's good advice for anyone."

A great teller of tales, some of them rather tall, he was on occasion asked by someone if that was true. His usual reply was, "Why, certainly. I wouldn't lie about it. I'd tell it six or eight different ways before I would lie about it."

When open burning was prohibited in Upland without a permit, he burned his pruning brush in the grove, anyway, usually on foggy mornings when the smoke didn't show much. If anyone questioned the permit angle, he replied, "Sure, I have a permit. I wrote it myself."

Now, I would never do things like that, at least not often.

Max Hawkins recently reminded me of Pop's bragging about his $1,500 dog. He said a fellow had offered him three $500 cats for it. □

Compens ground but not spirits

It didn't deter one child (right) who merely pulled out her umbrella and braved the elements. City officials estimate that 8,500 witnessed the two-hour parade.

It rained on Rancho Cucamonga's parade last Saturday.

But that didn't deter children of every age from lining Base Line Road to see the floats and the bands go by.

The fifth annual Founders Day Parade was kicked off by the new Etiwanda High School Band. The group was followed by city officials and honorary grand marshalls, the Millers Outpost cowboys.

Despite cloudy skies and predictions for rain, the parade began right on schedule and proceeded without delay.

The final band marched out of the Alta Loma High School Parking lot well before noon and just as the rain began coming down.

Community Services Director Bill Holley estimated that 8,500 watched the parade.

"Frankly we expected a lot less because of the weather," Holley said. "Considering the weather, we had a phenomenal turnout."

Float sweepstakes went to Schlosser Forge, the Mayor's award was captured by Pixie Troop 1118 and the City's award went to Girl Scout Pixie Troop 1068.

The music sweepstakes award went to Orange Glen High School.

I don't know about you but I feel like I'm in the middle of the lull not before the storm but before the holiday rush. As Thanksgiving draws nearer and nearer, plans for entertaining friends and relatives whirl through my head. I'm sure most of you are in the same predicament planning menus and searching for that big tablecloth that will fit the dining room table with two extra leaves in it, looking for that tasty recipe for cranberry relish that someone gave you last July. We all do it year after year, from the week before Thanksgiving up until you kick back to watch 106 bowl games on New Year's Day.

Now that you have some time to yourself take the family and dine out, they'll love you for it.

If you enjoy Italian as much as I do then the spot for you is Mamma Leone's at 9155 Archibald in Rancho Cucamonga.

I had lunch there the other day and let me tell you it was certainly a tasty repast. I usually don't eat a lot for lunch but I really devoured the eggplant parmigiana with a side order of spaghetti. The sauce is absolutely out of this world. If you are an aficionado of Italian cuisine this is the place for you. I wanted to try the New York style pizza but restrained myself, next time I'll have the two slices of pizza with salad for only $2.50. Sounds like a most tasty lunch.

Several of the other luncheon combinations might interest you. There's the boneless chicken parmigiana, spaghetti with meat ball or meat sauce, cheese ravioli or manicotti. The sandwich specials might not be a bad idea. How about a meatball submarine sandwich with salad or the chicken parmigiana submarine with salad?

One of these evenings I'm going to take my husband by the hand and head for Mamma Leone's for dinner.

The special this week is shrimp scampi served with soup or salad, garlic bread and a side order of spaghetti plus this week only you'll receive a glass of your choice of house wines or a glass of beer. The price for all this food is only $8.75. There's also lasagna for only $4.25 and baked ziti for $4.50.

Lunch at Mamma Leone's is served from 11 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. and dinner starts at 5 p.m.

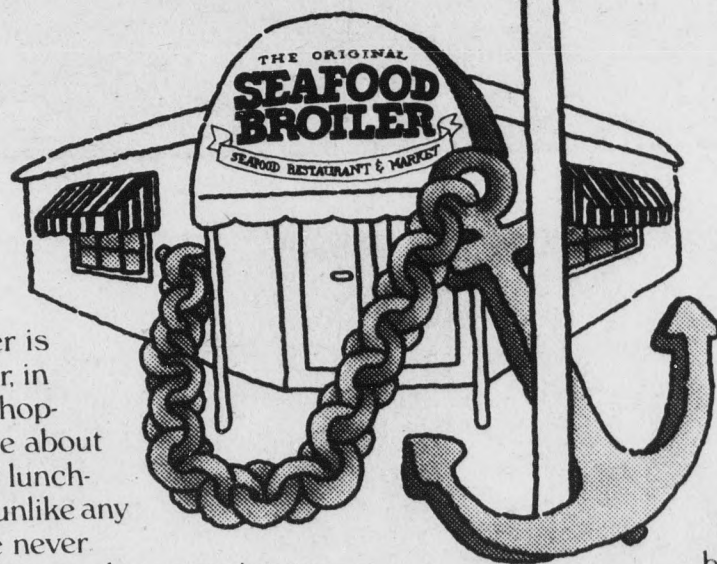

Don't go there on Sunday, they're closed.

Now that you have Italian food on your mind let me mention Biscardi's Italian Deli and Grill at 8661 Baseline Rd. in Cucamonga in the Sunrize Center. The specialty is Italian and American food and also food to go. If you clip the coupon you'll save $1.50 per pound on the imported boiled ham. Instead of paying $3.69 you only pay $2.19. I'm all for saving money even a dollar here and there adds up in no time at all. It's really a good habit to get into.

Until next week...Bon Appetit!!

Seafood Lovers,

your ship just came in.

The Seafood Broiler is now open in Montclair, in the Montclair Plaza shopping center. And you're about to enjoy a dining (and lunching) experience quite unlike any other. Because you've never before tasted seafood so tender, so moist, so wonderfully tempting.

For the seafood here is as fresh as it can possibly be. And that good, fresh, subtle flavor is sealed in, as it is quickly broiled over glowing mesquite wood. All kinds of boneless filet of fish. And crab, lobster, shrimp, clams, oysters, mussels. Your choice of a variety of vegetables. Good hot sour-dough bread. Real butter. Salads. Definitely different appetizers. Desserts to overwhelm your willpower. There's a full cocktail and oyster bar. A rather choice wine list. All in bright, new, cheerful and charming surroundings. And there's even a Fish Market, right in front, where you can buy the best and the freshest seafood, for at-home meals.

Oh, the temptations of it all! Oh, the tantalizing good flavors! And oh, my, the happily modest prices—complete lunches from $3.95, and dinners from only $5.95.

ENTERTAINMENT & DINING GUIDE

True-life adventures of the private eye

"When dealing with interstate theft, it's a federal offense and carries a high penalty. People get upset when you arrest them because they know they're going to jail. Some of them put up a little argument."

Greenlee said being a private investigator is not like what people see on television. "Its difference is it's a lot more serious and not all the fun and games."

"A lot more time and work are put in then people would believe because the accuracy of an investigation could result in someone going or not going to jail," Greenlee said.

According to Greenlee, 85 percent of all theft is committed by workers stealing from employers.

"Theft spreads like cancer. First one employee will take something, then another, until it has to stop."

"Most employers will want to fire the person who stole from them. Others want to prosecute. Most employers who set the pattern of prosecuting have a lot less theft in the future."

Greenlee recalled one investigation of a large trucking company that made local deliveries. "They found a large shortage in inventory and thought it was in the paperwork. Fourteen out of 15 employees were running their own delivery service, making more money than their employer. All 14 went to jail, but it closed down the business."

Tools of the trade include cameras — video as well as still — binoculars and, sometimes, different cars, according to Greenlee.

Bob Heard, of Heard's Investigation and Polygraph Security Agency, does civil, criminal, traffic and domestic investigations.

Heard does fact-finding in traffic collisions, takes photos, gets in touch with witnesses, and measures different points at the scene to prepare a report for experts in laws of motion, who will study the accident.

In domestic investigations, "it is usually during a divorce. People want to know what their spouse is doing, so you watch their activities that are job-related as well as family-related," Heard said.

Heard, who is a former policeman, said he likes his work. "It's interesting, no two days are alike and it is constantly changing. You're not a paper-shuffler behind a desk. You meet interesting people." □

'Scrooge' takes to La Verne college stage

"Scrooge," the musical adaptation of Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," will be presented in December at La Verne College's Dailey Theater.

Austin Peay will direct a cast of 27 and Leslie Dunn will serve as musical director.

Meredith Parry has been named choreographer.

"Larry Basso of Upland, plays the title role," said Peay. "All the other performers are under age 19. We were definitely looking for a seasoned performer for the part of Scrooge."

Basso has appeared locally with the Ontario

Civic Light Opera and in Chaffey College productions, where he appeared in children's productions of "The Nemesis" and "A Monster of My Very Own," which were subsequently video taped for TV. Performances will be Dec. 10, 17, 19, 20, 21 and 22 at 7 p.m. Admission will be $5 for adults and $4 people 18 and under. Group rates are available for groups of 20 or more. A special rate is also available for nonprofit children's organizations. For more information and tickets, call 947-4273.

Silent classics from Germany will be shown

An eight-part series of classic German silent films will be shown at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art on consecutive Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. Nov. 30-Jan. 18.

The series is offered in conjunction with the museum's major exhibition "German Expressionist Sculpture," on view through Jan. 22. All films will be shown in the museum's Leo S. Bing Theater.

"Currents of Expressionism: The German Silent Film" features eight examples of German filmmaking from the years 1919-27 which demonstrate the pervasiveness of Expressionism's influence on all of the arts and how, in particular, that influence was key to the development of German cinema. All of the films are newly reconstructed 35mm prints, including the most complete version to date of Fritz Lang's "Metropolis."

In addition to the feature films, short films by Hans Richter, Kerne Metzner, Wilfried Basse, and others will be shown at each program. Robert Israel will provide organ music accompaniment for all of the films. All German title cards will be subtitled in English.

For information, call the

The image is the iconic album cover for Pink Floyd's 'The Wall'. It features a high-contrast, black and white close-up of a man's face, likely Roger Waters, with his mouth wide open in a scream or shout. The image is heavily shadowed, with the right side of the face in deep black. Overlaid on the right side of the face is the text 'Pink Floyd' in a stylized, handwritten font, and below it, 'THE WALL' in a larger, more expressive, almost calligraphic script. At the top, in a smaller, simpler font, are the words 'Live 1982, The Wall' and 'But Not For Long'. In the bottom left corner, there is a small rectangular box containing the text '120 MIN. With hair or feet, Feters draws attention

By Tom Vivian

Most celebrities will attest that it's tough to attract attention when they're surrounded by other celebrities.

The same holds true for sports.

Upland High School's Ken Feters, who will run in Saturday's CIF-Southern Section cross country finals at Mt. San Antonio College, knows the feeling.

Feters, however, took a bold step toward ensuring he'd be easily recognized regardless of who he was with.

Running cross country for the Highlanders can be a humbling experience. During the 1970s, Bob Loney's squads were perennial powers in the sport, and the school also produced the paragon of milers, Steve Scott, a 1974 graduate.

Feters, 17, has not had a problem being noticed. Saturday will mark his third appearance in the cross country finals. In Baseline League meets during the past season, he was unbeaten.

An unblemished record, however, was apparently not enough recognition for the personable senior.

From his feet to his neck, Feters epitomizes the typical long distance runner. He's thin, angular, well-defined and built for both speed and endurance.

From the neck up, though, he looks more like someone who ran away to join the Marines. The hair on all sides of his head is no longer than 1/16th of an inch.

"I've had hair like this since mid-season," Feters said. "It makes me feel good because it makes me stand out a little bit."

Regardless of the decreased wind resistance his short-cropped hair provides him, Feters faces a formidable foe Saturday in Barstow's Jimmy Ortiz.

"I'd say that right now Ortiz is probably the second best two-miler in the state," Loney said. He added that he expects Ortiz to win, but he didn't completely rule out an upset win by Feters.

"Ortiz should win it. After that, he (Feters) can run with anybody," Loney said. He also said he told Feters that should Ortiz exhibit signs of suffering a bad day, or getting locked in the pack, to "run on by him."

Feters, however respectful of Ortiz's accomplishments and audits, said he will simply go out and run his best race Saturday.

"Sure, I've set my goals (in cross country) high. I may fall short, but I'll still have given it my best shot," Feters said.

To prepare, he said he will not think about the race until Saturday morning, and will also engage in his usual training schedule of 35 to 40 miles each week.

Last Saturday in the prelims, he clocked 14:01 on the shorter rain course at Mt. SAC. The weather should remain stable through the weekend, but Feters said he will be ready for any climate conditions.

"I've just got to prepare for both courses," he said.

'I've had hair like this since mid-season. It makes me feel good because it makes me stand out a little bit.'

Ken Feters

Strategically, he said he will attempt to remain as close to Ortiz as possible, and then make his move during the last leg of the course.

"I have to get contact (bunching together with the five or six best runners) at the beginning of the race," he said. "I'll need to maintain it for the first mile and a half or so, then I'll see what happens."

Feters said he has had some letters from colleges seeking his running services next year, but he would ideally like to attend nearby Cal Poly Pomona, which won the NCAA Division II cross country title last week.

"They've got a really good team there, and I'd really like to run for them," Feters said.

Loney said Feters has the physical potential to be a successful collegiate harrier, but he will need to put more emphasis on the sport to realize his potential.

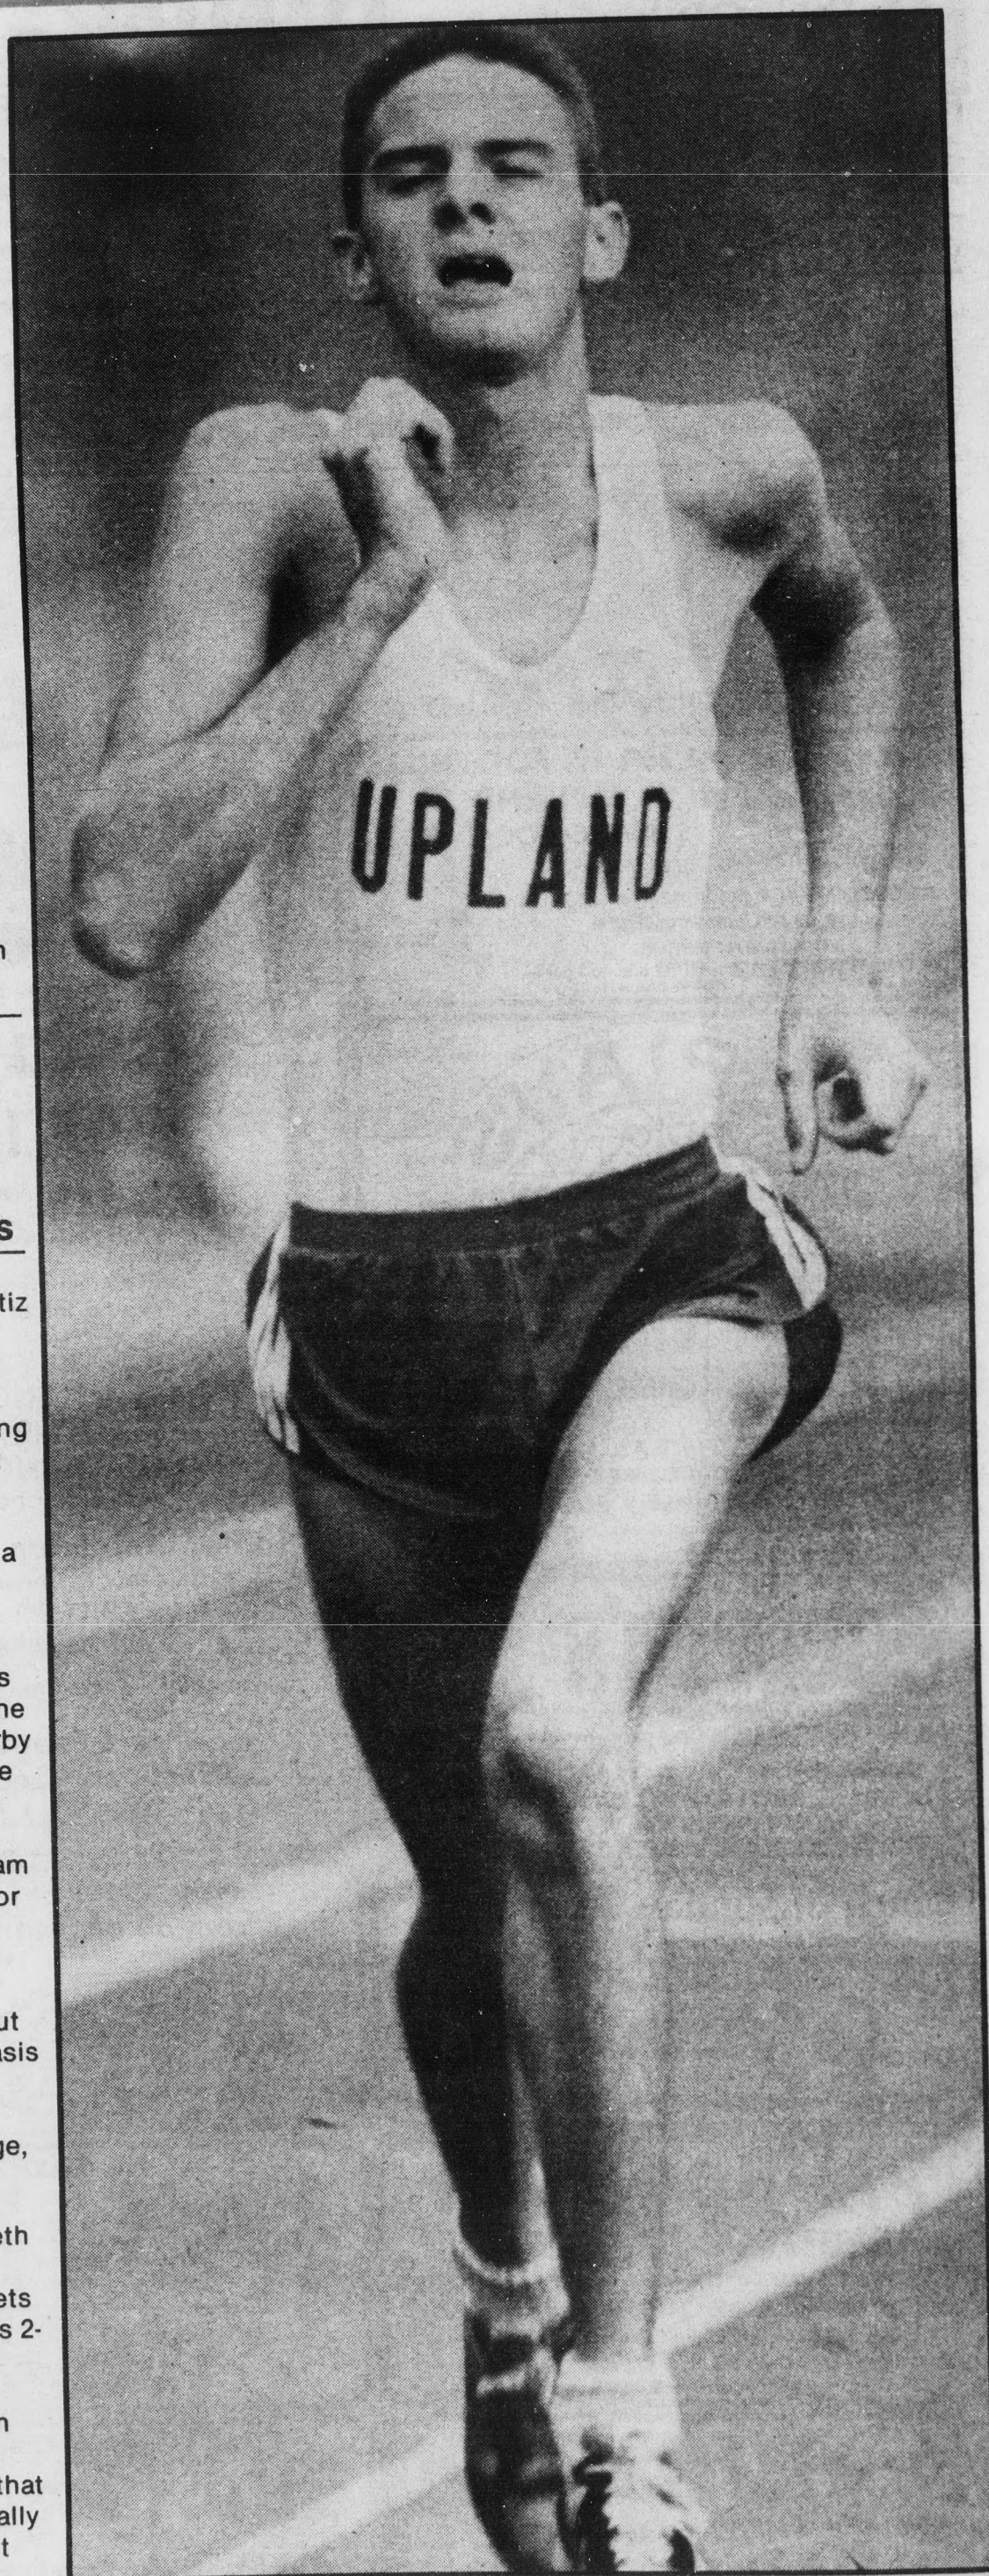

"If he's going to run in college, he needs to set it as a high priority," Loney said.

On the girls side, Upland's Beth McGrann, a force on the girl's circuit throughout Baseline meets this year, placed 10th in the girls 2-A division.

"Some days you have it, and some days you don't," McGrann said of her performance.

Loney said later in the week that McGrann was not "psychologically ready" Saturday, but he was not disappointed in her effort.

"She ran well, she just got out early and let the pack go by her later," Loney said.

Tom Tondee

Upland's Ken Feters has set the CIF cross country title as his goal.

Hope aims at title repeat

Chaffey College's Joel Hope will be gunning for his second state title at 1 p.m. Saturday in the State Community College cross country championships at Woodward Park in Fresno.

Hope, who won the state 10,000-meter run last spring and has developed into a marathon runner, qualified for the cross country finals by placing third last Saturday in the Southern Cal Regionals. His time for the four-mile course was 19:07.

Long Beach City College's Gonzalo Huggins finished first in 19:00, and Orange Coast's Gus Quimones took second in 19:06.

Chaffey's Katie Johnson ran a non-qualifying 14th in the women's competition, turning 17:52 for a lifetime best.

Hope set a blistering early pace in the race, passing the mile mark in 4:23 and two miles in 9:02.

"That was my mistake," said Hope in recalling his race strategy. "I played games (leading, falling back) with the guy from Long Beach, and I should have let him be the workhorse (leader)."

Despite finishing third, Hope is confident he can take "all the marbles" in the state meet.

"I was fourth in the Southern Cal 10,000, but I won state," Hope noted. "Who comes out on top is what matters."

Lynn Buehler, Hope's coach who will accompany his protege on the flight north, said: "Joel's going up there with only one thing in mind and that's to win, not to play games."

The most difficult opposition Hope faces at state, Buehler said, figures to hail from the southern part of the state.

If Hope does win the state crown, it will cap an eventful week in the life of the former Alta Loma High School athlete.

Joel's wife Debbie gave birth to a son, Benjamin Aaron Hope, Tuesday morning — 11 days later than anticipated. The same day, Joel started a new job at Coco's in Ontario.

The 25-year-old Hope is pointing toward a berth in the Olympic marathon in 1984. He placed 73rd in the recent rain-marred New York Marathon.

Rams reach finals in Cup action

Thanks to two-touchdown performances by Ken Crawford and Jeff Buries, the Upland Rams have advanced into the finals of the Mt. Baldy Conference Pop Warner Commissioner's Bowl Saturday at Chino District Stadium.

The junior pee wee team defeated the Rialto Redskins by a 26-7 count to advance into the finals. Game time Saturday is 11:30 a.m.

Trailing 7-6 at halftime, Upland scored a pair of touchdowns in the third quarter to take the lead and added an insurance score in the final period.

Crawford scored on runs of 32 and 53 yards while Buries ran 24 and 14 yards for his TDs. In addition, Buries also kicked a two-point conversion for the Rams.

Crawford ended the day with 109 yards in nine rushes, while Buries picked up 87 yards in six carries. Larry Blake also added 61 yards to the offense on three packs.

Defensively, David Thordson and Mike Navarro paced the Rams with seven unassisted tackles, while Ethan Jackson and Erik Hrins added their support to the Rams' efforts.

Justin Jones, and B.J. Williams also were lauded for their defensive play in the victory.

Eric Vilchis

SEASON'S OVER — Despite the efforts of sophomore Millicent Watkins, defending state volleyball champion Rim of the World ended the season for Upland High School's girls' team in the second round of the CIF playoffs. Upland had defeated Gladstone in the first round of the playoffs.

Borbon paces Cal Poly's title effort

Cal Poly Pomona laid claim to its seventh national championship in the past eight years by winning the NCAA Division II men's cross country title Nov. 12, at the University of Wisconsin, Parkside in Kenosha, Wisc.

Seven Bronco runners participated on the challenging 10K course in 40 degree weather and they came away with a 14-point advantage over second place St. Cloud State, Minn.

Cal Poly scored 86 points to win its first ever National Championship in cross country. The national championship trophy collection already included baseball (three times — 1978, 1980 and 1983), women's tennis (twice — 1980 and 1981) and women's basketball (1981-82).

The Broncos relied heavily on the outstanding performances of seniors Matt Blaty, Tony Reyes and Gary Borbon, all of whom received NCAA Coaches All-America honors, but in winning the title it was a total team effort.

Blaty finished ninth overall with a time of 31:04, followed by 11th place Reyes at 31:09 and 14th place Borbon at 31:14. Steve Perez captured 41st place at 32:00, while Jeff Williams was 43rd at 32:03. David Loud ran 32:16 to wind up 60th, while Brock Vaughn was 113th at 33:46.

"Strategy-wise they ran the way we had hoped for," said Cal Poly head coach Jim Sackett. "We planned on having our top three runners in the top 10 at the one to two mile mark and they were running there. The other four runners we asked to stay back a bit because it is a deceptively tough course and we wanted them to be aggressive at the end. They ran under control."

"The guys felt the pressure to live up to our number one ranking (which the Broncos had been all season) and they came through," he said. "Gary, Tony and Matt had been waiting five years for this to happen (winning the championship). This is a great highlight of my career. Not many coaches are able to win a national championship and work with a nicer group of individuals."

A total of 17 teams and 132 runners competed in Saturday's race. Brian Ferrari of California State, Pa. won the individual title at 30:38.

The week's Bronco Runner of the Meet was Borbon of Upland, who finished a strong third place for the national champions at 31:14.

The senior operations management major, known as the Broncos' "Mr. Consistency," has been part of the "fearsome threesome" of Blaty, Reyes and Borbon since 1979.

"He has been an important key to our success throughout the years," said Sackett. "We were confident that he could do the job for us and he did. When he ran at the nationals in 1980, he had the flu bug and finished 60th. It is nice for him to be able to go back and earn All-America honors this time around."

Police defend cage honors

The Upland Police Officers Association will defend its donkey basketball title when it takes on the Upland High School Letterman's Club Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the UHS gymnasium.

Proceeds from the 10th annual event will be split by the two participating organizations.

The police won last year's game 60-56 and enjoy a 7-2 edge over the nine-year history of the benefit contest.

Cost of admission for the game is $1.50.

to the state scholarship fund. It provides scholarships for young people to get teaching credentials to teach the hearing impaired," she said.

The local group also donates to special education schools, or to needy families who have a child with a hearing problem.

The Emblem Club is a separate organization from the Elks Club, but part of its work is in support of the Elks. "The Elks Club major project is helping crippled children, so we also contribute," Hoxsey said. "We have bought kitchen equipment for the Elks, bused tables to defray their expenses." "We try to decorate the lodge for them, giggle a lot and have a lot of fun," she said.

The Emblem Club will hold a Grocery Give-Away drawing at Albertsons in Rancho Cucamonga Saturday. "Tickets are $1 but you can get $2 off a Straw Hat pizza," Hoxsey said.

The club meets at the Elks Lodge, 12481 Base Line Road, at 7:30 the first Thursday each month and has a social on the third Thursday.

Family reunited after long years apart

than one month later by a couple from Fleming, Colo. Bill Jr. was never adopted. He remained in the orphanage until joining the military at the age of 17. He later returned to Denver and worked for the telephone company there until retiring two years ago.

The two younger Hines' children — Betty Jean, who was born May 29, 1929, and James, who was born March 14, 1931 — were adopted, respectively, in June 1938 and May 1933 by separate families.

Tolleson's adopted parents moved to Pomona in 1938 with her and Bob. She remembered a childhood here filled with love, but said she thought of her biological mother over the years. She was reluctant to try to find her because she didn't want to hurt her adopted parents.

Her adopted father died in 1949 at the age of 52, but her adopted mother lived to the age of 84. Following her death, Tolleson obtained her birth certificate in 1975 and discovered she was born in Del Norte, not Denver. Then she began to read books on adoption.

"I never got over wanting to find Mom. I always knew in my heart there had to be a good reason for her to give us up for adoption," Tolleson said. "I wondered who my children looked like, where I came from, what my mother's life had been like since we left. All I remembered of my mother was she was dark-haired and small."

"I got a tremendous amount of support from my husband and children. A friend from the Los Angeles County Adoption Bureau advised me on the proper channels to follow. I was old enough when I left my mother to remember my original name. The Prospector, the newspaper in Del Norte, is over 100 years old. So I called there and was fortunate in talking with a reporter named Ruth Sales. She searched through the old papers and found my birth announcement."

From that point, a host of incredible things happened. Tolleson's vacation date was abruptly changed in September. He called his wife from work and said "We must go now or wait until November. I was packed and ready to go by the time he got home from work," Mrs. Tolleson said, laughing. "That was on Friday, Sept.

23. We got to Del Norte on Sunday, the 25th. Everything fell in place by the 28th.

"It was a little, old town. There were two motels, a nursing home a restaurant and a hospital. I later found out my half-sister Georgeanna Parker lived right next door to the motel where we stayed. And my other half-sister, Elizabeth Hansen of Duarte, had been visiting there. She had left the morning after we arrived."

The friendliness of folks in Del Norte made it easier to find out information. Everyone knew everyone. A restaurant owner referred the Pomona couple to Len Woods, an octogenarian who had been a volunteer fireman, volunteer weatherman and "rememberer of facts and people" in Del Norte.

Aided by Woods and Sales, and the sheer determination of Tolleson, information on Tolleson's biological family was quickly unraveled.

Without revealing her true identity, Tolleson visited her mother in the nursing home. Mrs. McGuire, who had suffered a stroke and has diabetes, spent a few hours talking with a nervous lady from Pomona, unaware at the time the woman was her daughter.

After meeting Mrs. Parker and an aunt, Dorothy Femmer of La Garita, Tolleson's confidence in the rightness of her search and findings were reinforced with their immediate love and acceptance.

"My mother said 'I thought we'd never see each other again. I love you.' Being a mother myself, I knew how mine felt. I was so happy to find her. And my happiness was increased because I was able to find my brother Bill through Georgeanna."

Hines had found his mother after returning to Denver. He knew that she had re-married later and had three girls and a boy. The boy died.

Besides the identical number of children born to Mrs. McGuire in her second marriage and to Tolleson and those to her brother Bill and his wife, there were other similarities in the lives of family members. Hines had for years mistakenly celebrated his birthday on Aug. 20 — actually Tolleson's birthdate — instead of Sept. 20.

"I have no regrets. All this wouldn't have been possible without Woods. I'll remember him all of my life. I didn't expect it all to happen within three days. Mom asked if I knew where the other children were. We're still looking for Betty Jean and Jimmy. And we're praying we'll find them, too." □ class, said.

Worley is working on his production of "The Tank," which rolls along blowing up obstacles in its path.

He said he had trouble keeping his background in his drawings still. "Sandbags are going to be moving around. I was making little changes each time (when drawing a frame) but I wasn't aware of it."

"I'm not a very good artist so I made stencils of the barrel of the tank and its turrets," he continued. "It's fun, but a lot of work."

Students work in class on their films, making five drawings a day.

"Our homework is drawing — we don't have books to carry," Marty Hitchcock, another student, said.

Hitchcock said his film was titled, "One day in the gym." "It's about a weight lifter having a hard time lifting a weight. He finally lifts it up and then crashes down through the floor."

Hitchcock said the class was doing "the same sort of thing real animators do. Each frame is drawn slightly different, the only difference (between them and us) is we do it on paper, they draw on different cellophane backgrounds and have sound."

Eric Perez had problems with characters disappearing from his film when he tried to draw a baseball game in progress.

"Sometimes I'd have people almost on top of each other when they were supposed to be running the bases," Perez said. "My mom helped me work it out."

Homework in animation class doesn't seem to be a burden for the students.

"Although it's something you have to do, you enjoy doing it. Not like math homework when you have to do something you don't like but you still do it," Worley said.

While a first for the Rancho Cucamonga area, classes in animation have been found popular in Rowland Heights School District, from elementary to high school.

"We've had the program for seven years and it's a popular class at the high school level," Dave Masters, founder and teacher of the district's program, said.

"Basic skills of writing, language arts are applied in a practical manner, skills learned in other classrooms. "It's fantastic motivation for kids to write, to be productive. Animation is their medium to communicate in," he said.

According to Masters, animation classes add to children's visual literacy. "They become very critical viewers and you can't get junk (in television programming) past them."

Pomona club sets concert

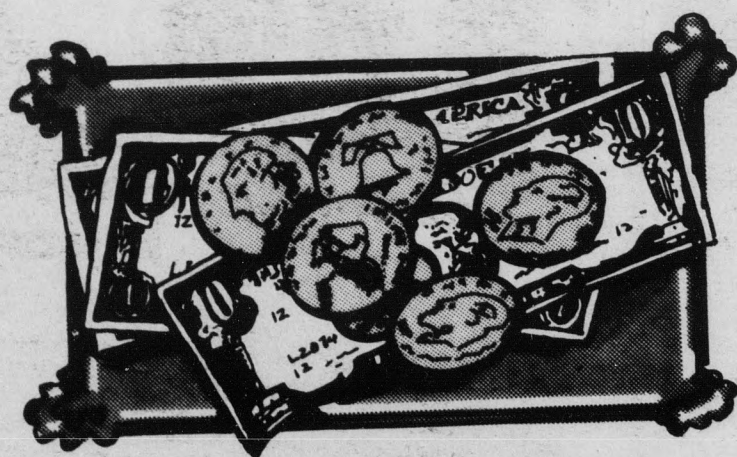

The Pomona College Glee Club will present a concert of music for organ and voices Saturday, Nov. 19 at 8:15 p.m. and Sunday, Nov. 20 at 3 p.m. in Lyman Hall, Thatcher Music Building.

The ensemble of 34 voices will be directed by Jon D. Bailey and will be joined by college organist William Peterson. The program includes motets by Samuel Scheidt, Benjamin Britten and Ralph Vaughan Williams, as well as the Organ Mass by Joseph Haydn. Peterson will also perform organ solos by William Boyce, J.S. Bach and Nicolaus Bruhns.

The glee club is a mixed chorus drawing membership from all students at Pomona College. It is the oldest organized group on the campus with a continuous history dating back to the founding of the college in 1887.

The concert is open to the public. Donations to defray expenses will be accepted.

The world of travel once was a stage

By Samuel J. Tolmasoff

The stagecoach was boarded in front of the old Bella Union Hotel near the Los Angeles plaza. As the passengers tried to make themselves comfortable in the narrow seats, their luggage was tied down on the roof-rack. The stage squeaked and squealed as weight was shifted about, the horses pawed the ground and snorted anxious to get going. The driver cracked his long whip and amid cheers and shouts of goodbyes, with a swirl of dust the Butterfield stage was on its way to St. Louis by way of San Gabriel Mission, El Monte, Spadra and Chino.

This is an imaginary scene, but doubtless it happened hundreds of times. The time was about 1859. This was the Butterfield and Co. Southern route, also known as the "Overland Mail!"

Before the coming of the railroads stagecoaches were the only mass (if you can call four to six passengers a mass) media of transportation. Even in our own West Valley the stages were the only way to travel to San Bernardino or Los Angeles unless you went horseback or rough-riding wagon.

The Butterfield route started in San Francisco to Los Angeles then eastward by way of Mission San Gabriel, El Monte, Spadra and Rancho del Chino. The last two were the only stops in the West Valley. From there the route went by Lake Elsinore, Temecula, Warner's Hot Springs to Fort Yuma in Arizona.

From Yuma it proceeded eastward to St. Louis, a total distance of 2,800 miles. The stages made two trips a week each way and you were "guaranteed" to be delivered within 25 days providing the Indians didn't get you first.

(Just imagine one of our space satellites covers that distance in less than 10 minutes!)

The route followed lower San Bernardino Road — the El Camino Real — but there was another route along the upper San Bernardino Road that went by the Palomares Adobe. The two roads joined near the county line and the stages followed this road to Salt Lake City, a distance of 800 miles.

With the start of the Civil War the Butterfield lines stopped operations to St. Louis and Salt Lake City. In 1868 the Wells Fargo Express took over the routes.

It didn't take long for trains to take over, then followed paved roads, automobiles and buses. The stage coaches went by way of the covered wagons — they had served their useful purpose and are now extinct. I had a hard time getting information on stagecoaches from our local libraries. Outside the Mark Twain's "Roughing It" very few people bothered about describing stagecoaches or the routes they followed.

Stagecoaches played a great part in the building of America but now they're gone.

I would very much like to ride in a stagecoach just once — feel the lurch and sway, axles squeaking, the driver shouting at the team of horses, cracking his long whip and dust swirling about.

I'd like that, maybe for a few blocks — otherwise, I'll drive my air conditioned car.

RC club honored

The Rancho Cucamonga Junior Women's Club has been honored for outstanding community service by the Junior Membership-California Federation of Women's Clubs and by Bank of America.

The club was one of 40 winners selected from among 117 affiliated clubs throughout the state in California Juniors' annual Build A Better Community program competition.

Lorene Zwissler, president of the club, received a $125 check from Vernon Rogers, assistant vice president, branch administration of Bank of America's Cucamonga branch in a ceremony held Oct. 17 at the club's monthly meeting.

During the past year, 117 California Juniors clubs in the state completed 3,774 projects which involved more than 200,000 hours of volunteer service in the areas of community health, conservation, cultural enrichment, education, and safety. More than $550,000 was raised in these projects to benefit local organizations.

Club sponsoring raffle

Rancho Cucamonga Emblem Club 520 is holding a Grocery Give-Away in front of Albertsons Market, corner of Base Line and Archibald, Nov. 19, 4 p.m.

developing the same type of program," Alexander said. Although middle schools originated as a way to improve adolescent education, there are other reasons school officials like the idea: It's a way to fill up underutilized high schools and relieve overcrowded elementary schools.

With the minor baby boom of the last few years, elementary schools are receiving a surge of attendance. Many high schools, on the other hand, have empty seats because of declining birthrates 14 to 18 years ago.
